1 Overview

In order to support a broad variety of geographically-based indexes, Nasdaq defines a universe of eligible exchanges on which Index Securities may be listed. This document describes the guidelines for determining exchange eligibility, and includes the finalized list of eligible exchanges, along with the geographical region and development status associated with each.

Individual index methodologies which segment eligible exchanges according to geographical regions and/or development status will adhere to the classification tables that follow, unless otherwise noted in the methodology.

Certain indexes may allow securities to be listed on additional exchanges not specified in this document, or may specifically exclude exchanges that would otherwise be eligible, as described in the individual index methodology.

2 Eligible Exchange Determination

Nasdaq relies on the Index Management Committee (“IMC”) to evaluate global exchanges for eligibility. The IMC meets to review and approve the list of eligible exchanges, and determines eligibility based on industry best practices, in conjunction with expert judgement.

Although adjustments to the list of eligible exchanges are not expected to occur frequently, the final decision of eligible exchanges lies solely with the IMC.

Third parties which provide data or inputs for the creation, maintenance or calculation of a benchmark are generally required to adhere to the exchange eligibility requirements established by Nasdaq and the IMC. The IMC may consider input from clients and other third parties regarding exchange eligibility, but is not obligated to make accommodations or changes to eligibility requirements based on that input.
